Green Watch from Spalding Fire Station are trained in large animal rescue and were looking for opportunities to diversify their training and make it more realistic with hands-on training with live animals.

Our advice and the reactions of the horses helped to highlight to Green Watch the best methods of dealing with large animals in a variety of different situations, some of which could be potentially stressful and dangerous.

Horses make perfect learning partners for the Fire and Rescue Services trained in large animal rescue, as although large and imposing they are accustomed to being handled; however their natural responses give immediate and authentic feedback about the handler's energy, body language and confidence.
